

Sink Party

by: Nadja Bolio

This article is exclusive to Homemaking Cottage and all copyrights are reserved

www.homemakingcottage.com

One busy day as my husband was rushing around with a number of tasks at hand, our three little boys grew restless and hungry. I had to work in an office and he, being a minister, often took care of them in-between his church duties. In order to get some work done in his study, he stopped in his tracks and pulled them aside saying, "How about having a sink party?"

"Oh boy, a party!" they cheered, gathering around our kitchen sink in wonderment. This truly was something different, something they never experienced before and couldn't wait to find out what it meant.

"Just stay by the sink," their father told them as he spread out the bread on the counter. "Pile on your own ingredients in any way you wish," he continued, as he doled out glasses of cold chocolate milk for each one. The boys went to town with their unusual creations, making elaborate Dagwood sandwiches that brought raves for the most clever. It gave Dad time to finish his work and the boys never forgot the memory of that special sink party day.

These ideas were created by: Nadja Bolio, and are Copyright 2006 The Homemaking Cottage
www.homemakingcottage.com

These ideas are free to use in your personal use, please note with proper notification of this website and author.

If you wish to contact The Homemaking Cottage, you may write to us at: P.O. Box 1675
Copperas Cove, TX 76522 or email us at: shihomemakingcottage.com

~~The graphics for this page were provided by: Graphic Garden www.graphicgarden.com~~
